

At our restaurants Uva Rossa and Pomodorino Rosso we are taking great precautions to ensure your safety during this most difficult time.

Our daily ritual practices of disinfecting protocol which has always been utmost important to us will continue to be enforced at an elevated level for the protection of our guests as well as ourselves.

Should any of our staff show any signs of illness they are expected and will be enforced to stay home to ensure your safety as well as our employees.

During this time our person to person contact will certainly be curtailed but by no means does that diminish our sincere gratitude for your continued support to come out and visit our restaurants during this trying time.

In addition we understand that you may not want to leave your homes quite as often as you may like or by putting yourself in an uncomfortable situation. So as usual please feel free to call your food orders in and we will be more than happy to help you.

Please be aware that we have everyone's best interest at heart and will continue to do so. We wish you our customers the best of health and we will ride this out together and continue to be here when you need us.

Warm regards,
Antonio Bove and Carol Cesone
